A CRY FOR HELP.

Result of a Prompt Reply. - Two Letters from Mrs. Watson, Published by Special Permission .-For Women's Eyes Only.

March 15, 1899.

To MRS. PINKHAM, LYNN, MASS.:

" DEAR MADAM: -- I am suffering from inflammation of the evaries and womb, and have been for eighteen months. I have a continual pain and soreness in my back and side. I am only free from pain when lying down, or sitting in an easy chair. When I stand I suffer with severe pain in my side and back. I believe my troubles were caused by over work and lifting some years

"Life is a drag to me, and I sometimes feel like giving up ever being a well woman; have become careless and unconcerned about everything. I am in bed now. I have had several doctors, but they

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been recommended to me by a friend, and I have made up my mind to give it a fair trial.

"I write this letter with the hope of hearing from you in regard to my case." - Mrs. S. J. Warson, Hampton, Va.

November 27, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I feel it my duty to acknowledge to you the benefit that your advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"I had been suffering with female troubles for some time, could walk but a short distance, had terrible bearing down pains in lower part of my bowels, backache, and pain in ovary. I used your medicine for four months and was so much better that I could walk three times the distance that I could before.

"I am to-day in better health than I have been for more than two years, and I know it is all due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I recommend your advice and medicine to all women who suffer." - Mrs. S. J. Warson, Hampton, Va.

This is positive proof that Mrs. Pinkham is more competent to advise sick women than any other person. Write her. It costs you

British Columbia Exploring Ground for

Washington, Mar. 15.-The region of British Columbia and Washington has for some years been a favorite exploring ground for ethnologists, who are collecting material about the Indians of the region. Owing to contact with the whites the native stock of Indians is fast disappearing, and with them their curious ceremonies and customs

Of the scientific investigators who are making a study of this region a number have noted their heaps of ricks of varying size, for which they could find no adequate explanation. Some consider them to be freaks of geological upheav-Indian inhabitants had piled them up for some ceremonial purpose, though the Indians deny any knowledge of them. Last summer Prof. Harlan I. Smith, of the Jesup North Pacific expedition, tore apart a number of these mounds, and the result is an interesting and valuable addition to American ethnology.

Every mound explored by Prof. Smith was found to be a tomb in which had been buried an individual of a race whose history is an entire blank, whose very existence has hitherto been unknown to ethnologists. This style of burial is not known in the earliest records of any of the northwestern coast peoples. One of the unusual and puzzling features of the discovery is the able to cull from the enduring stone sepulchers a single definite fact as to chitectural remains or rulns were found which might have been inhabited by inhabit that region have no traditions or legends regarding them. Prof. Smith believes that the race was of a lower ers or mound builders, and that it was beyond question extinct long before the day, March 18. advent of the whites

The excavations began in the southeastern part of Vancouver Island, B. C., and in the San Juan group and Whidby islands, state of Washington. A whole series of the massive stone tombs, each containing a single skeleton, was found. Some of the skeletons were in a state of good preservation; others were all but disintegrated. The great number of the buriai places, extending well down into the state of Washington, indicated that at one time the race that practiced this form of sepulture must have been numerically strong and politically powerful. Prof. Smith spent three months of the past summer in uncovering and exam-Ining some hundred of these old burials, which had escaped the serious attention of previous investigators. He thus describes these ancient tombs, which are technically termed cairns:

"They are from six to twenty-five feet in diameter and generally consist of an irregular pile of boulders, many of which are of huge size, weighing several tons and requiring the strength of four men with crowbars to dislodge them. These structures are usually situated on slopes with gravelly sail strewn with irregular bowlders. They overlook and in most cases are near the sea, and the graves in each group are about twenty-five feet apart. They are usually located within a mile or so of shell heaps. As these latter are very numerous all along the coast, their proximity is thought to imply probably a historic relation between the two kinds of structures. One stone tomb is found over each body.

"The entrance is composed of a more some cases the vault is not well formed, and in other instances the cover stones are so small that they do not form a projecting roof over the body. this vault-like opening the rough pile of stone is reared. A feature of this grave is that a huge fir tree, six feet in diameter, estimated to be more than 200 years old, stood near the grave and its roots extended through it, showing that the tree had grown up since, al, while others believe that the present the construction of the grave. The roots of the tree had pushed the skull about two feet from its natural position. Originally the head had turned toward the northwest.
